What is IFSA?

The International Forestry Students' Association (IFSA) is a globally organised and locally operating non-profit student organisation - one of the largest among its kind. Since the 1970s we connect forestry students from all around the world to their peers, to diverse establishments in the sector, as well as policy platforms. Essentially, we are providing opportunities for networking, empowerment, and education to our members - the next generation of forestry experts.

What is IFSS?

The International Forestry Students' Symposium (IFSS) is the biggest annual IFSA meeting. It's a platform with an atmosphere of solidarity and inspiration, that enables the students to participate in various forestry activities, exchange information and share their experiences.

The IFSS is also a platform for managing the internal affairs of IFSA and it hosts the General Assembly, where the new Board gets elected, the yearly budget is accepted and the strategy developed. Representatives of the Local Committees from 60 different countries worldwide take decisions for IFSA - strengthening it and outlining its path for the future. The main focus of the symposium however, is on the activities and the students' interactions. Most of the time will be spent visiting forests, natural and national parks, factories and institutes.

What do we want to accomplish?

In 2023 we are hosting the 51st IFSS in Germany and will provide participants from all over the world with the opportunity to learn about our country and its forests.

The main emphasis lies on the challenges German forestry is facing at present. This will be embedded within a comprehensive portrayal, including the understanding of the structure of German forestry, history and traditional use, different forest types, dynamics of climate change, as well as mitigation and adaptation strategies. In order to realise this diverse program we will have a roundtrip over two weeks, covering big parts of Germany.

Summary

In a nutshell, the IFSS is a 16-days event with 130 forestry students participating. The estimated costs run up to a total of €236,000. This includes transport, accommodation, food, lectures and seminars, activities, merch and event documentation. All necessary planning and coordination is being done by the Organizing Committee run by volunteers.

For the realisation of this project we are dependent on your help. Therefore, we kindly ask you to consider becoming a sponsor to our vision.
